HISTORICAL RECORDS SOLD.

Valuable Virginia Documents Disposed of to a Junk Dealer. (Special to The Times.)

Richmond, Va., Oct. 3.—Much interest has been aroused here over the reported sale as junk of valuable literary works belonging to the State.

When the State library was removed from the capital building to the new State library building, about twenty tons of old books and documents were left in the old quarters, supposed to consist of legislative reports and worthless pamphiets and records. After advertising for one work the committee sold the entire lot to a junk dealer for a small price.

Ex Librarian Poindexter says that in the lot were documents covering the history of the State that are invaluable and cannot be duplicated. It is said that the junk dealer has been offered a large sum for his purchase by a Northern man. He left the city to day, presumably in connection with the negotiation. It is thought the dovernor will take steps to recover the valuable part of the records

The Difficulty of Securing Safe and Profitable Investment for Small Capital. s'he large number of people who are pe sessed of moderate means or savings are constantly experiencing the difficulty of obtaining safe and profitable investment. The investment that promises good returns or fat dividends seems always to be for the capitalist, the already rich, the influential in financial circles. Take, for instance, the most profitable of all current investments, cotton namufac

Heretofore small investors have not generally been able to share in the large profits made by cotton mills. Building associations and savings banks have been their only means of accumulating savings By this system, so successfully introduced in the South, any one who can lay aside even $2 per month can become a stock-holder in a cotton mill. As funds accumulate under this system of monthly pay ments, the contracts for the buildings and the machinery can be let without waiting for the final installments to be paid in. Before the stock is all paid up the mili can be in operation.

Several years ago a few people at Char-lotte, N. C., decided to attempt to raise capital for building a cotton mill on the building association plan. The value of such a system as this can readily be seen. It enables the South to furnish the capital for building its own coulon mills rather for building its own cotton mills, rather than wait on outside help. It stimulates the saving of money and furnishes a safe and profitable investment for the small and profitable investment for the small soms that would otherwise be wasted, but which, aggregated in this shape, furnish capital for the construc-tion of many mills. The first mill at Charlotte started on this plan, with a capital stock of $100,000, proved so profitable that other companies were organized on the same basis, and it has now become a regular business, just as the organization of building associations. Among the successful mills for which capital was raised on this plan are the Alpha Cotton Mills of Charlotte, N. C.; the Chewalla Mills, of Eufaula, Alabama; the Statesville Cot-ton Mills, of Statesville, N. C.; the Ada Cotton Mills, of Charlotte, N. C.; the Highland Park Gingham Mills, of Char-lotte, N. C.: the Gaffney Cotton Mills, of Gaffney, S. C., and a number of others. Every mill built on this plan has been re-markably successful, having paid large dividends to the stockholders. The most conservative business men and capitalists of the Carolinas strongly advocate this sys-tem as of the greatest value to the South. And at last a similar opportunity is of-ferred to Washington investors. The New-port News Cotton Manufacturing Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of has been incorporated with a capital stock of $500,000, part of which will be shortly offered for subscription in Washington. CONFEDERATES IN REUNION. Big Gathering of Old Soldiers at Fair-

In commemoration of the death of Capt. John Quincy Marr, said to be the first Confederate soldier shot in Virginia during the civil war, the citizens of Fairfax, Va., and of the adjacent territory turned out in large force yesterday, in accordance with a biennial custom of holding a Confed-erate reunion. Capt. Marr fell near the spot where the present monument stands erected to the memory of its people who died for the ost cause. Fully 1,000 citizens met in the large yard adjoining the old courthouse, erected early in this century, and for two hours listened to some stirring speeches by gen-tlemen of repute in the oratorical world.

The master of ceremonies requested Mr. R. Walton Moore, a leading lawyer of Fairfax, to make the opening address, which he did with much effect.

Col. Berkeley, of Alexandria, followed with a tribute to those who had failen in the war, and enlargered the leave with he war, and eulogized the living who had fought.

MORTON POST'S TROUBLES

Grand Army Court-Martial Will Investigate Them To-night.

Commander Boston Has No Fears and Insists That the Proceedings Shall Be Public.

The court-martial of Post Commander George H. Boston, of O. P. Morton Post, G. A. R., because of troubles with officers of the Department of the Potomac, will take

The court-martial was originally set for September 26, but at that time Commander Boston was in Norfolk at a Grand Army

Boston was in Norfolk at a Grand Army reunion, and the trial was postponed until to-night.

The charges against Boston, as prepared by Department Commander Marion J. Auderson, are that the post-commander violated the laws governing the Grand Army when Department Commander Marion T. Anderson and Assistant Inspector-General William P. Saville visited Post Commander Boston's post and the former remonstrated with Boston for his conduct and were told to do their worst.

The bone of contention that is believed to have been the cause of all the trouble lately experienced in Oliver P. Morton Post is that the per capita tax due on July 1 has not been paid. This difficulty in the post resalted in very few members going to Louis-ville, only about eleven taking the trip. As this is not the first time the per capita tax has not been paid promptly the department has determined to investigate the matter. Post Commander Boston is not the least cast down by the overhanging clouds of a court-martial. To a Times reporter to day he said that he was ready for the fight.
